Keynote Address

Speaker:

Mr. Chad Foster

Chad Foster entered the business world in Louisiana at age 19, parlaying an unsuccessful attempt at professional tennis into a business surfacing tennis courts. Eventually, Chad expanded his recreational surfacing vision by converting millions of pounds of recycled tire rubber into a soft, safe playground surface. That product, can be seen on thousands of McDonald's Play lands around the world. The surface also provides a safe play environment for millions of visitors to Disney World in Orlando, Florida.

Mr. Foster set out on a two-year, cross-country fact finding trip. His travels and research convinced him that young people in America were receiving an incomplete education and were not being fully prepared for their inevitable entry into the real world of work.

Chad's concern for young people prompted him to write his best-selling book, "Teenagers Preparing for the Real World". The book is most convincing in its purpose to promote dreams, communication skills, integrity, career exploration, education, and community service in the lives of young people. "Teenagers Preparing for the Real World" has been developed into an integrated curriculum that has been incorporated by 4,000 middle school and high school classrooms nationwide. This project-based curriculum has exposed the valuable messages of Chad's book to more than 500,000 students.

Chad serves as an Advisor to the Heart of America Foundation, a national organization created to encourage America's youth to participate in community service and to do for others who are less fortunate. Chad is also the host of his own television show, Fly Fishing America, which can be seen in 60 million households, on Saturday mornings in April, May and June on ESPN2.
